Ringtone software for cellular phones

Friday, February 16th 2007 - 21:33 CET

Magix Ringtone Maker 2007 gets complete tracks into your cell phone. They are still working on how to get your cell phone to double as a razor or a radar detective, but its multimedia functionality is already growing a mile a minute. Especially music playback is coming to the fore, and the latest music cell phones are just pleading to be accessorized. This is where Magix Ringtone Maker 2007 comes into play - here's who supplies your portable receivers with loads of free complete MP3s, ringtones, and the rest of the stuff that makes having a cell phone so much fun. In addition you can create and transfer funny logos, animated background pictures, and video ringtones from your own material.

Magix Ringtone Maker 2007

You get it all without paying a cent more for any subscriptions. And as long as we are talking about being thrifty: the program is available from March 13 for only £19,99. The new Magix Ringtone Maker 2007 has not only a complete list of suitable media and compatible cell phones to its name, but also a full range of transfer methods. Bluetooth, cable or infrared are already known. Now you can upload a ringtone using a generated WAP link anywhere, anytime. Or, the other way around, you can send your homemade ringtones directly from the program to your friends as an email.

Cellular Phone Report 2006

According to Cellular Phone Report 2006 (Xonio/Chip), 30 percent of cell phone owners listen to music using their device. For even more music enjoyment, playback software for Symbian cell phones is available as a free download for registered Magix Ringtone Maker 2007 users - the Magix Mobile Music Player. Integrated into this cell phone software is a real music detective by the name of AudioID Mobile. He can quickly find out what's playing: Simply hold your cell phone to the music source like radio or loudspeakers, and the technology will recognize the song and artist name.

Mobile Cellphone Ringtones

Off into the blogosphere: Your ringtone, (mobile) videos, and photos can be uploaded directly from Magix Ringtone Maker 2007 to spice up you online diary in Magix Blog Service. Just as easily you can place up to 128 MB of multimedia material for free into Magix Online Album and Magix Community.
